... Teachers

(Continued From Page 1) that labor unions have made many fine contributions to the American way of life, but an industry-wide strike comes perilously close to the power of levying and controlling an army. It is a strike against society. It is above the power of the government. Among governmental employees in a democracy anything approaching a strike is a strike against the people and their government."

HE THEN reminded his listeners that the schools are a government and suggested that teachers take a long look at any organization that could conceivably organize a strike.

"Our children should not be taught disrespect for law and order by the example of their teachers who belong to a movement which has often set itself above government even in times of emergency," he said in conclusion.

MAYOR ISEN welcomed the teachers to the community and reviewed from his own experiences the remarkable growth of the Torrance school system which, he said, had a class of 16 when he was graduated from high school here.

He told of the impact the new Superior Court branch would have on Torrance toward rounding out the development of the city. He also asked for the help of the teachers in acquiring the proposed four-year college to be located in the Southwest area by the state.

BERT LYNN, acting Board of Education president in the absence of Albert W. Charles, welcomed the teachers. Others participating in the program were Lloyd Jones, chairman of the meeting; the Rev. Milton Sippel, of First Christian Church, who gave the invocation, and an orchestra composed of Torrance instrumental music teachers. William C. Boswell and William J. Hanson, board members, were introduced as well as other school and community leaders.
